Architecture MasterPrize Announces 2025 Award Winners

Honoring Outstanding Architecture, Design, and Architectural Photography Across 72 Countries

Los Angeles, December 16, 2025. The Architecture MasterPrize announces the winners of its 2025 edition, recognizing outstanding achievements across the global architectural and design community. This year's submissions arrived from 72 countries, underscoring the international reach of the program and the wide range of cultural perspectives represented among the honorees.

Each year, the Architecture MasterPrize celebrates work that elevates the built environment through design excellence, innovation, and thoughtful engagement with contemporary challenges. The 2025 edition continues this tradition, highlighting projects and practices that address sustainability, social responsibility, and the evolving relationship between people and place.

The 2025 winners include an accomplished mix of internationally recognized studios, independent practitioners, and emerging talents.

Among this year's award recipients are works by Pritzker Prize laureates Álvaro Siza Vieira, Kengo Kuma, Zaha Hadid Architects, and Shigeru Ban. They are joined by leading global practices such as Safdie Architects, Snøhetta, Dominique Coulon & Associés, Perkins&Will, Ennead Architects, Aedas, Alison Brooks Architects, Atelier Brückner, LAN, LOLA Landscape Architects, and OKRA landscape architects.

Together, these awarded projects and practices reflect a broad spectrum of architectural thought, combining technical refinement, cultural relevance, and a strong engagement with contemporary challenges.

The awarded projects represent the full scope of Architecture MasterPrize categories, including architectural design, interior design, landscape architecture, product design, and architectural photography. Collectively, the winners demonstrate how design continues to shape culture, community, environmental responsibility, and the experience of the built environment.
