Architecture MasterPrize Opens 2026 Global Call for Entries Following Record Participation from 72 Countries

Los Angeles, February 19, 2026 - The Architecture MasterPrize today announced its 2026 call for entries, inviting architects, designers, and studios from around the world to submit work across architecture, interior design, landscape architecture, product design, and architectural photography.

The announcement follows a 2025 edition that recognized work from 72 countries, including projects by Pritzker Prize laureate Álvaro Siza Vieira, alongside internationally recognized practices such as Kengo Kuma, Zaha Hadid Architects, Shigeru Ban, Safdie Architects, Snøhetta, Perkins&Will, Ennead Architects, Aedas, Alison Brooks Architects, Atelier Brückner, and OKRA landscape architects.

"Architecture today navigates urgent questions about climate adaptation, social equity, and how communities shape their futures," said Hossein Farmani, President of the Architecture MasterPrize. "The work we're seeing from every continent showcases that design excellence and environmental accountability are no longer separate ambitions—they're inseparable. The 2026 edition will continue to honor projects that reflect both creative vision and cultural responsibility."

2026 Architecture MasterPrize Top Honors Open to Established and Emerging Voices

The 2026 edition welcomes submissions from established firms, independent practitioners, emerging designers, and multidisciplinary studios across major categories and programs:

- Architectural Design
- Interior Design
- Landscape Architecture
- Architectural Product Design
- Architectural Photography
- Firm of the Year and Design of the Year Awards

Entries are evaluated by an international jury of academics, media professionals, and industry leaders. Winners receive global recognition through editorial coverage, official certification, use of the AMP winner seal, inclusion in the online winners gallery, and promotion across international channels.
