Located in Trancoso, the residence translates the tropical essence of the Brazilian coastline through architecture integrated with the native landscape. Developed across a flat site bordered by vegetation, the project unfolds transversely, guiding the arrival experience toward the house. Organized on two levels, the timber-structured roof reinforces lightness and horizontality, while the interplay of solid and void creates openness between private volumes and leisure areas connected by a sculptural staircase. Social spaces on the ground floor open toward the pool through expansive glazing, strengthening the relationship between interior and exterior. Warm timber tones, natural light, and tropical landscaping create a continuous dialogue between architecture, nature, and contemporary coastal living.
